"A hamster can make a wonderful stocking stuffer this year"

NOT A THERESA in Edmonton

Dear Minuscule,
I don't know what to get my partner-in-love for Christmas. Can you help?
Signed, Not A Theresa
Dear Not A Theresa,
Hmm... does he already own a hamster? Hamsters make wonderful gifts, and hamster-related accessories are excellent as a follow-up. The little wheel is especially fun; I have heard nothing but good things about the little wheel.

Dear Minuscule,
I can't get enough of Soul Calibur. It's always there and I just can't resist. I have tried to quit, but the urge to play with IVY is irresistible. What should I do?

Signed, Charles X
Dear Charles,
You pinheads should get back to work, or play Baldur's Gate 2!!

A DISGRUNTLED TRENT OSTER SPORTING HIS NEW BODY.

Producer Trent Oster was minutes away from death after a stack of monitors fell over and crushed his bones. "We must rebuild him," was over heard by onlookers as the CEO doctors of BioWare examined the carnage. Oster was taken immediately to the cellars of BioWare, where surgery began. "It was touch and go, but we managed to scrounge up a body without a head from one of our old D&D campaigns," said Dr. Greg Zeschuk after the operation. "Grafting Trent's head onto the body was a simple matter of a wish spell. Not common to the normal level four, but since we made up the level system, we decided that we'd make ourselves high enough level to manage," added Dr. Ray Muzyka as he gave the high five to Zeschuk. Weeks into his recovery, Trent has vowed to do whatever it takes to even the score with his saviors. "THEY GAVE ME A FREAKIN' GNOME'S BODY!" ranted a pained Oster. "WHAT KIND OF SICK JOKE IS THIS?" When asked if he'll be back to work soon, Trent replied sadly, "Kill me...kill me please...won't somebody please just kill me?" Truly, a triumph of the will. Get well soon little fella.

RUSS RICE AND COCKROACHES ARE THE ONLY TWO THINGS THAT CAN SURVIVE A NUCLEAR HOLOCAUST!!

In an announcement with grave implications for the primacy of the species of man, scientists have discovered a second species capable of surviving a nuclear holocaust. Like the cockroach, the simian humanoid, Russus Riceus, or Russ Rice in layman's terms, has evolved to the point where mankind's most powerful weapons are incapable of destroying him.

"By 'evolved' we mean stuffing himself with every sort of vaguely edible toxic and carcinogenic substance known to modern man", says noted biorussicist Dr. Ray Zeschuk. "I mean, have you seen him eat? That guy's disgusting."

"If he should ever reproduce..." Zeschuk went on ominously, "it will surely mean the end of life as we know it."

Russ Rice's long time companion.
